Welcome to the Duke Medicine Community

Pat Thibodeau, Associate Dean for Library Services & Archives

Each year we are excited to welcome new residents, students, faculty, and staff to the Duke community, as well as reintroduce ourselves to those who have been at Duke for a while.

Duke Medical Center Library & Archives offer a tremendous number of resources and services to Duke Medicine ranging from:

- Traditional reference and circulation services to in-depth information consultations and one-on-one training
- Basic tours and orientations to evidence-based medicine training and online tutorials
- Archival materials and historical works to cutting edge biomedical journals and databases
- A friendly service desk to a robust Website designed with you in mind
- A quiet study space to group study rooms and a café area for collaboration and socializing

I hope both old and new members of the Duke Medicine community take time to visit our facility and become acquainted with some of our new resources:

- Large screen video displays in the group study carrels for use with laptops
- Additional computer workstations and new furnishings on the mezzanine level
- Relocation of the current journal issues to the first stack level, next to the bound journals
- A revamped “new book” service with immediate loans and a bigger display area for new titles
- A Library blog for news items and announcements and another blog just for new books
- RSS feeds to keep you linked to our Library news
- And in case you have forgotten, food and drinks are now allowed in the Library!

Our Website (<http://www.mclibrary.duke.edu/>) will be an important gateway to our resources and services even if you do not come to the physical Library. Be sure to “visit” our:

- Clinical Tools and Nursing Tools pages for easy access to Web resources
- E-journal collection which now includes a greater number of older volumes (thanks to main campus)
- Redesigned History of Medicine Website
- New MedSpace repository for Duke’s archival documents and images

From Our Shelves to Your Computer

Russell Koonts, Director, Medical Center Archives

Google. YouTube. MySpace. Amazon. Technology has made it possible to get virtually anything you want, any time of the day or night, from the comfort of your home or office. Need to shop for that last minute Christmas gift? Go to the Internet. Need to find an illustration for an upcoming lecture? Go to the Internet. Presently, over 233 countries are connected to the Internet, and it is estimated that nearly 1.1 billion people worldwide use the Internet, according to Internet World Stats (<http://www.internetworldstats.com/stats.htm>). At this point, you may be saying to yourself, "That's interesting, but what does it have to do with the Library & Archives?"

With help in the form of a 2005 grant from the Josiah Charles Trent Memorial Foundation, Inc., the Medical Center Library & Archives (MCL&A) digitized over 500 images from its collections that documented the growth and development of the Medical Center during its first three decades. Although this project was initiated to help celebrate the 75th Anniversary of the Medical Center, it provided an opportunity to create the infrastructure and skills necessary to make other types of resources available via the Internet. The 75th Anniversary image collection can be viewed at <http://archives.mc.duke.edu/foundations/index.htm>.

In October 2005, MCL&A began using DSpace (<http://dspace.org>), an open source digital repository application developed by MIT, to make our digitized content available to researchers. This application enables items to be indexed and searched by commercial search engines such as Google. By implementing DSpace, we are able to provide access to more than just digitized photographs. For example, we have added the transcript of an oral history interview with Dr. H. Keith H. Brodie. In September 2006, as part of an agreement with the Undersea and Hyperbaric Medical Society (UHMS), the Medical Center Library & Archives added articles from the UHMS journal to the repository and "officially" launched DSpace@DukeMed (<http://dspace.mclibrary.duke.edu>).

In August 2007, MCL&A will launch MeDSpace (<http://medspace.mc.duke.edu/vital/>), which is being developed to collect, preserve, and provide access to a wide variety of digital resources developed at Duke Medicine. Built with open source software from the Fedora Project (<http://fedora.info>) and Visionary Technology in Library Solutions (<http://vtls.com>), MeDSpace has the functionality to restrict item access to selected individuals or groups, or for specified time periods. This will allow MeDSpace to host internal digital projects, as well as provide a place for Medical Center faculty and researchers to post copies of their articles. Presently there are no such articles in MeDSpace, but this is a service which the Archives will be promoting in the coming months. Eventually, MeDSpace will serve as the repository for electronic archives (data sets, speeches, etc).

Remember that we are here to support your learning, teaching, patient care, and research activities. Do not hesitate to ask our expert professional librarians and staff members for help in finding the information you need.

We also want to hear how we can strengthen and enhance the services and resources we offer. So please share your suggestions and comments with us, through our suggestion box in the Library, via mclref@mc.duke.edu, or just send an email to me at thibo001@mc.duke.edu.

I hope you explore both the virtual and physical aspects of the Medical Center Library & Archives and that you have a very successful year at Duke Medicine.

Staff News

Michael Davidson, Assistant to the Associate Dean for Library Services, is now an MSII Clerkship Coordinator in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at Duke. Michael had worked at the Library since 1999.

Our Staff Welcomes You to Duke!

Faculty and Instructors...

Adding links to Library resources and content can help your students access scholarly resources for their writing, research, and other projects. You can also add a link to the Library’s Ask a Librarian page, to make it easy for students to get research help by Instant Messenger (IM), email, phone, or personal appointment.

For help selecting or linking to resources, or for more ideas to incorporate the Library into your virtual or physical course, please contact Connie Schardt (schar005@mc.duke.edu or 660-1124) or Megan von Isenburg (megan.vonisenburg@duke.edu or 660-1131).

New Public Scanner Installed

Marcos Rodriguez, Information Technology Services

The Medical Center Library has installed a new flatbed scanner for public use in the MLEC lobby on the Lower Level of the Library. In addition to traditional one page scanning, it can accommodate landscape orientation and includes trays for scanning slides and photographs. The scanning station computer includes CD-RW, floppy, and Zip Disk drives, as well as two USB ports to accommodate flash drives. The computer has also been upgraded and now has Adobe Acrobat Professional and HP scanning software.

Additional computer resources are available in the Multimedia Studio, also located in the MLEC lobby (Room 104J). The Studio provides a place for users to work on Duke University Medical Center-related projects and consists of a workstation with multimedia creation and editing tools, a webcam, software for image editing and OCR document creation, and a high-resolution scanner. A complete list of Multimedia Studio resources is available at <http://www.mclibrary.duke.edu/services/multimedistudio?tab=ware>.
